TECH SPECS

The Article One Active Optical Collection was created to extend the same ethos and design sense of our Active sun collection into the optical category. For this new collection, we are using a new innovative material called GKM, a polymer plastic that has many characteristics making it more desirable than typical optical frames made from acetate. This new material, proprietary to our factory, is lighter, more flexible, and more scratch resistant than acetate, making it the perfect material to use for our Active Optical collection. Along with the innovative frame material, we have designed and developed new Active nose pads specific for this collection, which accomplish the same grip as our sunglasses while remaining hidden and discrete on smaller optical frames. The Active Optical frames are completed with high quality spring hinges and engraved ridges on the temple tips to assist with grip. Every innovative and thoughtful addition creates a frame that can be worn from the start of the day to the end and every activity in between

Philosophy:

The decision to design the Allegan was an easy one. When our design team first laid eyes on Hanley, one of our recently released sunglasses, we all agreed – “These would be beautiful in ophthalmic!”. With adjustments made to better fit and ophthalmic use, we sent the Allegan in to our partners in Italy, and here we are.
